Glenn Coler, Mokena, Dies In Charleston, Ill., Hospital of Pneumonia

Stricken last Tuesday with a sudden attack of lobar pneumonia while attending the National Teachers College in Charleston, Illinois, Glenn Coler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Coler of Mokena, passed away in the Charleston hospital Sunday morning at 6:45 o'clock.

Shortly after he was stricken, his mother rushed to his bedside and made arrangements to have him taken to the hospital where every thing known to medical science was used to stop the ravages of the disease, but all was in vain. He was placed in an oxygen tent and serums were administered but with no success. At times the fever reached 107.

From Friday on, he was in a comatose state and remained thus to the end.

The faculty of the college and the students showed a wonderful spirit of sympathy to Mrs. Coler and their kindness and assistance was manifested in more ways than one. On the return trip home, Mrs. Coler was accompanied by three of her son's fellow students, Chas. Brian, Allen Patison and Miss Betty Jane Ewing.

Glenn was born in Mount Carmel, Illinois November 30, 1911. The family resided in Tinley Park for awhile and then located in Mokena.

Glenn was a fine clean-cut young man and had the happy faculty of readily making and retaining friends among instructors and students alike. He was of a keen mind and his scholastic achievements were quite outstanding.

After completing his high school course at Joliet, he entered the college at DeKalb, Ill. Last fall he registered in the National Teacher's College in Charleston and within another year he would have been ready to take up school work as an instructor. He was in the flower of his youth, with all of life's opportunities before him when death closed his life's book.

He came of a ministerial family, his grand father having been active as a pastor in the Christian church for 45 years.

Glenn was prominent in Players and had just completed his pledge in Phi Sigma Epsilon fraternity. Honorary initiation ceremonies were held in his honor Sunday afternoon. A pin, signifying official membership in the organization will be presented to his mother.

Surviving are the parents, Ralph E. and Edna W. Coler, one sister, Doris and one brother, Warren beside other relatives.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the late home on Wolf road in Mokena, where the Rev. A. J. Martin, pastor of the Christian church in Joliet had charge of brief services, to the St. John Evangelical church. Here the services were conducted by the Rev. C. G. Kindred, pastor of the Englewood Christian church, assisted by Rev. Theodore Haelele pastor of St. John Evangelical church and Rev. Wm. Skadden, pastor of the Baptist church of Charleston.

Samuel Cobb, soloist of Chicago, sang, "In The Beautiful Garden Of Prayer" and "In The Garden."

An honor guard of twenty-five fraternity brothers took part in the services also. The pall bearers were fraternity brothers and were: Elmer J. Haire, Ivan Liddle, Dane Bouslog, Gene Lederer, James Michaels and Dale Trulock.

Dean of Men of the National Teachers College, Mr. H. F. Heller and Miss Baker, representing Alpha Psi Omega, National Dramatic Fraternity of DeKalb also attended the funeral.

Following the services in the church, the fraternity held the concluding services at the grave in St. John Cemetery south of Mokena.

The floral tributes were profuse and beautiful.

Those from out of town attending the funeral services were: Mrs. Ethel McDermott, Muskegon, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McClelland, Robert McClelland, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shideler, Mrs. Chari Trumbly and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cobb all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weedon and daughters Esther and Beulah of Mt. Carmel, Ill.; Mrs. Grace Scofield of Joliet; Miss Etta Baker, Highland Park, Ill.; Kathryn King, Lee, Ill.; and Mrs. H. King of Chicago.

Mokena Village Politics Getting Hot; 2 Tickets In Field

The past week has seen much activity in Mokena village politics. Several weeks ago, hardly anyone could be found willing to run for a village office, but suddenly a lot of aspirants for village offices began to show up.

The first indication of political activity in the village was last Thursday night when John H. Nordsell filed for the office of village clerk on an independent ticket. Since the following candidates have filed their petitions with village clerk, Paul J. Roesener and will be on the village election ballot for April 20.

Independent ticket No. 1: For president of the board of trustees, Walfer Olson; for village clerk, Everett Cooper; for village trustees: Willard Marti, Wm. Semmler, Robt. Gauthier, James Eggerton.

Independent ticket No. 2: For president of the board of trustees, Harry Mall; for village trustees, Julius Oswald, Albert Braun, Lloyd Warning, Fred Rauch, Harold Spiess and Byron Nelson.

From all indications the election will be quite spirited. Now it is up to the voters to pick the best men.

Mokena Weekly Awards Will End On March 31st

At a meeting of the Mokena Business Men's Association held in the home of the president, Geo. F. Wannemacher Monday night, it was decided to discontinue the regular Business Men's awards which have been held every week for the past year and a half. Coupons will be given by the members of the Business Men's Association up to and including March 31 which will be the last award.

The reason given for discontinuing these awards was a lack of interest being shown in these awards and another reason advanced by some of the members is a question as to the legality of making these awards, since the question of the legality of bank nights in theaters came up several months ago.

The members further decided that if at any time in the future, there should be a demand for a resumption of the weekly awards, a meeting would be called and the matter given further consideration.

The Mokena Business Men's Association really is to be given credit for holding-out as long as they have as it has been a previous experience that many of these business men's associations, seldom survives for more than six months at the most.

Inasmuch as the Mokena organization outlived the usual span of life of these groups, there is hopes that it may be revived again in the future.

Four Towns and Bands Planning For Joint 4th of July Celebration

A very fine movement has been started in the four neighboring towns of Tinley Park, Frankfort, New Lenox, and Mokena to celebrate together the 4th of July. This has been brought about thru the school bands in these towns who are, also under the direction of the same instructor, Mr. R. B. Wight.

Start in this movement was made last Thursday night when representatives from the Band Parents Associations of these towns met in Mokena school auditorium. A good number attended this meeting.

Mr. Wight called the group to order and explained the idea and then suggested each group to get into a huddle and select two from each group to act as an executive committee and who in turn, together with the aid of the other attendants chose Wm. Mabey, President of the Tinley Park Band Parents Association as Temporary Chairman. He was later elected permanent chairman who in turn selected Mrs. Netchy of Tinley Park as his secretary.

The idea of celebrating 4th of July was thoroughly discussed very freely by all present and after a clear understanding it was decided to rent the Frankfort grove on route 45 and have a good old fashioned July Fourth celebration. This will not be a band contest but each band will play and exhibit their ability. Other bands from nearby towns will be asked to attend and play.

The proceeds from this day will be equally divided among the four sponsoring Band Parents Assoc's.

This is not only a fine idea for these organizations but will afford a wonderful opportunity for the people living in this territory to work and play together and meet each in a mutual and friendly way. It is showing promise already of doing just that thing and much enthusiasm is shown.

Last Thursday night, following chairmen were appointed by Mr. Mabey with the idea each association was to at once meet and appoint two of their members to serve on each committee as the following:

Publicity, Mrs. R. E. Coler, Mokena; Finance, Fred Krog, New Lenox; Concession, Henry Bettenhausen, Tinley Park; Parade, Herbert Lambrecht, Frankfort; Entertainment, Walter Pfaff, Frankfort; Traffic, Harold Spiess, Mokena; Grounds, Ray Brown, New Lenox; Music, R. B. Wight; and Dance, Everett Cooper, Mokena.

Because of July fourth falling on Sunday, it was decided to hold the celebration on Monday, July 5th.

There will be further details announced after the completed committees meet and make final plans.

Frankfort Seeking Recreation Project

All Things Are Engaged In Writing Their History

Nature will be reported. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain; the river its channel in the soil; the animal its bones in the stratum; the fern and leaf their modest epitaph in the coal. How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?

Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS'." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:
Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE LAST OF THE ROBBER RATS.

ALMOST at the heels of the last frightened rat, fleeing from the house of Billy Mink's friend, the farmer, appeared Billy Mink himself. The rat started for the big barn, but Billy caught him before he was half way there.

The farmer, who had been watching, knew that that was the last rat. He knew it because he knew that Billy would not have shown himself outside as long as there was a rat left inside. At once the farmer went over and stopped up that hole so that no rat could get back into the house. "You killed one of my chickens, you little brown rascal," said he, "but you've paid for it ten times over. I had intended to kill you for that beautiful brown coat of yours, but now I wouldn't harm a hair of it. As long as you stay around here the better I will like it, and I shall see to it that you have plenty to eat."

Billy Mink didn't hear this, and he wouldn't have understood it if he had. But he had already made up his mind that the farmer was his friend and that was sufficient.

After catching that last rat to leave the house, Billy went over to the woodpile where he was making his home. It didn't take him long to discover that some of those rats were hiding in the woodpile, and he promptly hunted them out of there just as he had hunted them out of the house. Then, being tired, he curled up for a nap.

For two or three days after that Billy Mink hunted rats. He hunted them until there was not one of that robber gang left in the big barn, the henhouse, or under the woodpile. In fact, there wasn't one of those robber rats left on the farm. Where those who had escaped had gone, the farmer didn't know, and Billy Mink didn't know, and neither of them cared. The farmer was so happy at being rid of those robbers that it seemed as if he couldn't do enough for Billy Mink. He kept Billy supplied with good things to eat, so that Billy didn't know what it was to be really hungry. He grew as fat as a mink can be, and he grew lazy as well.

Now Billy Mink is not naturally lazy. He is one of the most active of all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. Not having to hunt for his food, Billy found little to do but eat and sleep, and after a week of this he began to get uneasy. He began to long for excitement and new scenes. And so one night Billy left his comfortable quarters and started back for the Laughing Brook in the Green Forest near Farmer Brown's, the place he really called home. He was anxious to find out if any of his friends there had been caught in the traps which had been the cause of his leaving the Laughing Brook. The next morning the food put out by the farmer for him was untouched, and the farmer knew that Billy had left. He was sorry.

FIRST-AID TO AILING HOUSE

By ROGER B. WHITMAN

DOING OVER A WORN VARNISHED FLOOR

WEAR on a floor first shows at doorways. That is where a varnish finish first gives out. With the varnish on the rest of the floor in good condition, the worn place can be patched. The first move is to go over it with sandpaper, and then to wipe with a cloth damp with turpentine to take up all traces of dust. Varnishing of the worn spot should begin in the middle, with the varnish brushed toward the edges. In this way the edge of the patch should not show; if it does, the joint can be lightly rubbed with fine sandpaper. When this coat is hard, a second coat should be put on in the same way.

Should the varnish on a floor appear dingy, although not worn through, a single thin coat of varnish all over will restore its freshness. Before varnishing, the floor should be washed. A floor should be washed in sections—not all over at one time. Thick suds of a pure soap should first be used, followed by clean cloths damp with clear water to remove all traces of the soap. A washed section should then be wiped dry and washing continued on an adjoining section. A wood floor should not be flooded with water; in washing, no more water should be used than necessary. Even so, some water will soak in, and a washed floor should have at least twenty-four hours drying before being varnished.

Good quality floor varnish should be used; inexpensive varnishes will quickly scratch and wear. A can of varnish should not be shaken or violently stirred, for either of these will produce air bubbles in the varnish that will mar the finished job. Beginning at one wall, the section should be varnished to the other wall, and then, returning to the start, the next width of strips should be varnished in the same way. Varnish should be applied with a fairly full brush, and should always be brushed in straight strokes. Varnish is spread forward by carrying the brush in straight strokes over the same place until an entire brushful is spread in a thin coat.

With quick drying varnish, and if all of the furniture can be moved out, a floor can be given two coats of varnish in a day. Otherwise, the furniture should be moved to half the room while the other half of the floor is being varnished. This half should be finished before the furniture is moved back, to permit the varnishing of the rest of the floor.

Varnishing should always begin across the room from a doorway, so that the worker can get out without harming the work.

KNOW THYSELF

by Dr. George D. Greer

Does a Person's Character Affect the Amount of Work He Can Do?

IT HAS usually been believed that working ability depended upon only health and native strength, but Dr. W. Brunner, German scientist, reports in his article "Charakterfeststellung durch Bewegungsproben" that tests devised and applied to workmen in Germany showed a definite close correlation between a man's character and his ability at work. He found that people of equal physical ability did not do the same amount of work, and on investigation and testing found that the difference was in the character of the men, and that this factor affected all workers more than had been previously known. Good character goes with maximum work, he found.

WAR'S ENEMIES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THESE are the enemies of war,
And war the enemy of these:
All mothers, fathers, even more
The little children at their knees
Who pay in poverty and gore
For this, the worst of sophistries.

These are the enemies of war,
And war the enemy of these:
All men who labor, building for
Their country and the centuries,
Destruction in the cannon's roar,
And war's petitions blasphemies.

These are the enemies of war,
And war the enemy of these,
But most of all the warrior,
Who knows of war's utilities
That settle nothing, justice or Injustice victor, as chance please.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

YOUR analyses of thumbs have doubtless impressed you with how greatly this important element of the hand varies with the individual in denoting the kind and quality of temperamental expression. This is also true of the fingers. Each expresses not only a basic characteristic of the inner self but also the manner in which it is put to use.

The First or Finger of Ambition.

This finger, sometimes called the Finger of Jupiter, has been held by the most celebrated palmists to be incontrovertible in its indications of the power to command, to attain and hold one's "place in the sun." Whether this very desirable quality of character is being actually utilized or is merely lying dormant awaiting its owner's recognition, you will find it clearly shown by a first finger that is of unusual straightness and strength.

If of medium length and of square type, the indications are of capability in directing others in the accomplishment of practical results along a variety of lines. If pointed, with a well-defined taper from base to finger tip, the ability to command will be expressed in more idealistic activities, such as drama, art or literature. If of spatulate type, we have the man or woman of alert executive mind which conceives big projects and drives them through no matter what the odds. If long and large-jointed, the indications are of power and ambition aplenty, but the kind that moves with slow and sure deliberation.

No matter what the type, however, absence of flexibility is invariably associated with the Finger of Jupiter that gains and holds a place of leadership.

Household Questions

Surveys have shown that once-a-day dish washing represents an economy of time.

Peroxide of hydrogen will remove perfume stains from linen bureau scarfs.

To improve the color in worn rugs add half a cupful of vinegar to half a pint of water. Soak and wring a large clean cloth in the liquid, then go over the carpet with wide strokes. The carpet should be thoroughly vacuumed before doing this.

Add two tablespoons of shortening to the griddle cake batter and it will not be necessary to grease the griddle.

When you store fresh fish and meat in any refrigerator it should not be covered closely. Bacteria in both of these foods multiply more rapidly in a humid atmosphere than in a dry one. Cover lightly if at all.

Gas, Gas All the Time, Can't Eat or Sleep

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."
—Mrs. Jas. Filler.
Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowels only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.
Dr. H. L. Shosh, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and constipation. At all Leading Druggists.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor: I have no intention of carrying on any further correspondence with the one who again only signed himself "A Citizen" except to remind him that the men on the village board were not elected to give the type of social service that he feels they should be responsible for, but were elected mainly to conduct the business affairs of this village. Our officeholders have considerable work and grief in fulfilling their duties and receive very little pay.

Would also like to tell "A Citizen" that if he hasn't enough confidence in his own ideas to follow them up with action, he shouldn't expect anyone else to do anything about them. Signed,

Of course, by "right way" we mean Jamesway. Jamesway chick waterers are galvanized after fabrication and are the finest you can buy. These waterers are easily filled and cleaned and they can't leak or flood.

When you provide your chicks with a Jamesway waterer you provide them with sanitary drinking conditions, with water that stays clean and fresh a longer time, and with plenty of water to care for an entire flock.

Jamesway Chick Waterers are made in a range of capacities from 4 quart to 3 gallons and accommodate from 25 to 250 chicks. The 3 gallon waterers have a copper float to control water level. Every waterer is made from heavy copper bearing black sheets "Galvanized After Fabrication" for longer life and strength.

Come in and see these waterers and learn why the Jamesway is the right way to water chicks. We also have a complete line of Jamesway Baby Chick equipment including the Jamesway Oil Burning Brooder Stove — the world's finest brooder.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Substance" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 14.

The Golden Text was, "If we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it" (Romans 8:25).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear" (Hebrews 11:3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Substance is that which is eternal and incapable of discord and decay. Truth, Life, and Love are substance, as the Scriptures use this word in Hebrews: 'The substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen'" (P. 463).

Around The Town

We hear Diamond had a heavy date with her 'le steady Tuesday night, but that she has a heavier one this Saturday night with a certain boy from Manhattan. Nice gain, Lil!

We've been told that a certain New Lenox girl likes to break up other peoples' furniture. Chairs especially. How about that E. S.? D. W. just can't get it through that head of hers that two from four leaves more than one.

V. K. claims that no matter how long people sleep, they all wake up some day.

It's rumored that a few of the gals and boys about town are going out steppin' Saturday night.

A friend wants to ask H. S. why he leaves his mouth open when he has his picture taken.

B. M. claims there isn't much left in life.

Mill M. seems to be getting along fine with a certain gal from Homer. Amongst those celebrating St. Patrick's Day in the good old Irish fashion were: A. W., L. C., D. W., and H. S. if you can picture him celebrating in Irish fashion.

According to a rumor the romance between L. S. and F. M. is all "washed up." A reader would like to know what happened and also if "Cake" is beating T's time.

"Hesty" appears awfully worried now that she fears her boy friend has entered a sit down strike at his work in Chicago and don't know when she'll see him again.

A friend tells us that G. O. is that way about B. Mc.

Yes, sir, since A. W. got a new car she meets her boy friend at the train every night.

L. B., M. H., R. M., and a few of the other boys about town certainly appeared to be having a grand time Saturday night.

A couple of New Lenox gals are anxious to learn who D. W. was out with last Wednesday night.

If Marge could have laid hands on Caneva from Lockport after the B. B. game Tuesday night, we wonder how things would have turned out.

Believe it or not, but W. S., E. N., P. B., R. W., and H. A. have gone in for drinking soda pop.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

Of interest to Homer residents is the news that David A. Gillette celebrated his 88th birthday this week. Having come to Will county more than 80 years ago by ox-team, Mr. Gillette now says that his one desire is to ride in an aeroplane so that he can truthfully say he has participated in the Alpha and Omega of transportation.

Uncle Dave, as he is known by all his intimate friends, celebrated his birthday anniversary with a birthday party and a birthday cake.

Since he was 6 years old, he has been a resident of Will county, spending most of his life on a farm in Homer township.

His wife, Sarah Marshall Gillette, who died several years ago, was a sister of A. O. Marshall, Will county pioneer.

Mr. Gillette said at his celebration "I have lived in a wonderful age. I have come from ox carts to aeroplanes, from mail once a week carried on horseback to news by radio almost as soon as it happens, and I have enjoyed every minute of it."

Among those wishing him well at his birthday celebration were his daughters, Mrs. Peter Hostert of Joliet, Mrs. Thomas Cooper of New Lenox and his son George of Whitmore, California.

Mrs. Harlow Jungles is ill in her home.

Mrs. Gladys Johnson underwent a major operation in the Silver Cross hospital.

The March meeting of the Ladies Missionary Society will be held in the home of Mrs. Stuart Vanderbilt with Mrs. Robt. Jungles and Mrs. Ross White as assisting hostesses.

Mrs. Reed Burch has been ill recently.

Randall Storm is a member of the March term of the Will County grand jury.

Betty, Rowley, Edward, and Elaine Ott have been ill the past week with the grippe.

Mrs. Alfara Kopleman who has been seriously ill the past week is much improved.

Friday evening a group of 50 young people from this vicinity enjoyed a banquet in the dining room of the Homer church. After a bounteous repast several speeches were given with Jerome Paddock acting as toastmaster. Rev. Clair of Aurora was the principle speaker of the evening and also lead the young people in singing.

Little Lila Mae Hewit has been ill the past week with ear trouble.

Word has been received from Kansas that Mr. Samuel Hartwell had suffered a stroke Saturday morning. Mr. Hartwell is well known in Homer as he spent most of his lifetime here.

Jeanne Frazer has been ill the past week.

Howard Brookman who has been a patient at the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet the past two months, has been removed to his home here. Howard has been suffering from a broken leg.

Tony Zoleski and Miss Bernice Olson visited Sunday with the latter's sister and husband Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lolly in Chicago Heights.

Mrs. Marie Ott and the pupils of the Lauffer school will sponsor a card and bunco party at Urch's hall in New Lenox on Friday night, March 19. The public is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Ott of Lockport were dinner guests Sunday at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ott.

The members of the Homer Woman's Community club were entertained Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Wray White. Mrs. Helen Rowley was the assisting hostess. The usual interesting program was presented with Mrs. Stewart Vanderbilt, Mrs. Fred Paddock, Mrs. Helen Rowley, and Mrs. Harry Parker taking part in it. Mrs. Fred Trask introduced the seed contest for the fall triennial. Roll call was awarded with "Ways to Remove Stains." The next meeting of the club will be held in the home of Miss Ida Harrington, with Mrs. Reed Burch as assisting hostess. Several guests were in attendance at the meeting, namely: Mrs. Bertha Bigelow and Mrs. A. Ingersoll of Lockport, Mrs. Amelia Morris, Mrs. Helen Gilkerson and Mrs. Erma Larson of Joliet, and Mrs. Wm. Ross and Mrs. Christel Koehler of Homer.

Mrs. Stuart Vanderbilt has been selected as one of the four Will county club members to present the activities of the Will county community league before members of the Lockport Woman's club in the Several families from this vicinity attended the tri-annual meeting of the Gleaners Insurance Company at the hall in Aux Sable last Tuesday night. The Maple Street Arbor was represented on the program by Miss Virginia Wheeler, Miss Isabel Anderson and Loren Sals.

An independent ticket has risen in Homer since the caucus and have announced the following candidates to be voted on in the April 6 election. Supervisor, Barney Welter; town clerk, Otto Konow; and collector, Timothy Donahue.

WILL COUNTY FARMERS AND JUDGE JOSEPH HARTNEY PUTTING STOP TO TRESPASING AND HUNTING ON FARM

MR. JOE KESTEL

Will County farmers and the law enforcing agencies of the county have united in a drive to stop trespassing and hunting on farms in the county. This drive has been brought about as the result of the reckless manner in which city hunters have been killing poultry and other live stock on the farms while out hunting, causing heavy losses to the farmers.

JUDGE J. H. HARTLEY

Following is an account of what recently occurred in Will County to put a stop to this situation:

On January 16th, Mr. Joe Kestel of New Lenox Township preferred charges against three trespassers found hunting on his property which is protected by the WLS Detective Sign. Three men, Gilbert, Clarence and Harris Johnson were taken before Judge J. H. Hartley of Joliet who assessed a fine of $100 and costs which will be a gentle reminder to the men concerned and all others who intend to hunt on someone's else property in Will County in the future.

Two of these men were from Chicago and one from Joliet.

Mr. Jos Kestel is active in the F Men organization of New Lenox and is becoming famous as a breeder of fine cattle. He recently shipped a thoroughbred bull to Jamaica.

Hibernation Strike Is Called Off

Calling off a threatened "hibernation strike", turtles and alligators at the Brookfield Zoo are back on the sand doing the stunts that make them popular with their pupils.

It all happened this way:

During the recent cold spell, reptile room attendants noticed a marked lack of animation on the part of their charges. Turtles sulked in the dark depths of the pool and alligators tossed listlessly in remote corners of rocky retreats. Appetites fell off, growth slowed and antics ceased. Something was amiss.

Investigation disclosed the cause. Room temperature was that to which the reptiles were accustomed but the sand where they romped and played was cold.

Zoo authorities and Public Service company engineers went into a huddle. The result was a unique installation of some 600 feet of hotbed cable—the same that has proved so successful for artificially warming earth in hotbeds and greenhouses.

Lutheran Hour

"We have to much empty speculation in spiritual matters, too many question marks and guess work assertions in our religious life," Dr. Walter A. Maier, declared Sunday on the weekly Lutheran Hour coast-to-coast network.

"Christianity is not a trial and error experiment, a hit or miss process," Dr. Maier added, "but the only final complete answer to the needs of every human soul in the confusion and contradiction of our 20th Century. The cross of Jesus Christ and the Saviour's cry of completed triumph, 'It is Finished' grant an immovable anchorage and show that Christian faith is not subjected to change, evolution or modification for this or any other age."

"We have more than 300 creeds and 'isms', divisions and subdivisions of denominations in our country today. Classify them according to their adherence to the Scriptures and you will find that many of them make the fatal error either of adding something to the completed Christian faith or subtracting and altering some of the truths that the

Illinois Leads In Old Age Pensions

Estimated figures for March of the number of aged dependents being taken care of through the United States under the cooperative federal and state social security plan indicate that Illinois is far ahead of all other states.

These figures were issued by H. L. McCarthy, Regional Director of the Social Security Board who said: "It is estimated that the number who will receive aid during March will reach 130,000. This is nearly one-third of the total number of persons who are past the age of 65 in the State of Illinois. Starting in with 22,000 cases last July when the social security plan for old age assistance was adopted by the State of Illinois, the number of needy aged receiving federal-state aid has jumped steadily.

"No other state approaches Illinois in the number seeking and obtaining aid except perhaps North Dakota which will take care of an estimated total for March of 102,500 and Texas with 90,000.

"Although its population is third in rank among the states of the union, falling 5,000,000 below New York and 2,000,000 below Pennsylvania, Illinois is taking care of nearly 50,000 more aged persons than New York state and 55,000 more than Pennsylvania.

"Under the old age assistance plan each state that meets the federal government provisions is awarded one-half up to $30 monthly by the federal government toward the support of its needy aged past 65. There are 42 states now under the plan.

"In the amount of money expended in cooperation with the federal government Illinois, according to preliminary estimates for March, ranks fourth, headed by Ohio first, California second, and Pennsylvania third. Combined federal and state expenditures for old age assistance in March will total $2,864,300 for Ohio, $22,612,300 for California $2,312,500 for Pennsylvania and $2,041,000 for Illinois. New York state is next with $1,754,800.

"Neighboring states of Indiana and Wisconsin are taking care of 26,300 and 35,000 respectively of needy aged, the preliminary estimates for March further show."

A "BY GUM DROP" CAKE FOR ST. PATRICK

WHO would trade one of mother's cakes for the fanciest creation of the town's best caterer? Here's one young man who would shout, "Not me" to such a question. And no wonder, with one of mother's gum drop cakes, made specially for his St. Patrick's party, ready at hand. With the cake this young man's Mother is serving glasses of pineapple juice given a St. Patrick's air by the addition of green cherries and green cellophane straws. None of the delicate flavor of the juice will be lost, because this modern homemaker is planning to use taste-free cubes of ice man's ice to chill the beverage and to add an appetizing sparkle as well. Furthermore, she isn't worried in case her small guests request seconds for almost by a modern miracle an abundance of ice cubes can be secured in a jiffy. This modern miracle is a little ice-cuber with a small tank attached. The tank is filled with hot water and placed on the ice in the modern ice refrigerator. In 3 to 5 minutes there will be a fresh supply of crystal-clear ice cubes—and each young guest can have "seconds" and even "thirds" of this wholesome beverage without fear that there'll be a shortage of cubes.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It has always been said that politics makes strange bedfellows. History has shown this statement to be true because in every political battle one can note unusual combinations, odd types working together, personal enemies fighting side by side—in truth, bedfellows for the time being.

Strange Bedfellows

Never has the truth of this old adage been better demonstrated, however, than in the current political fight that was precipitated by President Roosevelt's demand that congress pass a law which will allow the Chief Executive to add six new members to the Supreme court of the United States. The real congressional fight on the President's bold move has not yet gained full headway. But time enough has elapsed since Mr. Roosevelt offered his history-making demand for power to add enough judges to the Supreme court, judges of his own selection, to give him a majority, that those close to the congressional scene are now in a position to predict probably the most heated controversy since the days immediately preceding the Civil war.

Already, it can be stated, one can see senators and representatives who are known for their liberal views standing side by side with hard-boiled conservatives in opposition to the President's plan, which they describe as a move "to pack the Supreme court." Likewise one can see conservative Democrats from the old South following President Roosevelt and joining hands secretly with the wildest radicals in the senate. One will see Democrats and conservative Republicans in earnest conversation planning ways and means to halt the President's drive for control of the court and at the same time one can see radical Republicans planning with Democrats in support of the program—strange bedfellows, every one.

While this condition is interesting, it is by far less striking as I watch the proceedings than the extreme bitterness that is now developing. While, as I said, the controversy is hardly under way, there is even now personal animosity evident in the senate to a degree that I never have seen before. I had the privilege of observing the famous League of Nations fight at close range. There was personal bitterness in that senate battle. Old friendships were crushed and close relationships torn asunder. Yet, I think that the current controversy is likely to cause the League of Nations bitterness to pale into insignificance. In other words, there lies ahead for the congress a raging fire that is bound to destroy political lives and political ambitions. Which lives and which ambitions depend, I think, upon the answer which the country's citizens give to the now direct question:

Are we to have a system of courts and judges, independent and free of politics, or are we to have puppets that will do the bidding of political masters?

I said above that the result of the Supreme court battle in congress will be determined by the attitude of the country. It is vital that the citizens realize this fact. Since President Roosevelt made no mention during the campaign for reelection in 1936 of plans to reform the Supreme court, there has been no public expression on the subject. There will not be another opportunity for the voters to express their views until November, 1938. The only way, then, open to those who want to express an opinion for or against the court change is by sending their views to their congressmen and senators. Conversations that I have had with members of the house and the senate convince me that the representatives and senators will appreciate word as to how their constituents feel.

Further evidence of the desire of congressmen and senators to know the feelings of the voters is given in the tremendous propaganda that is going on. Friends and foes of the Supreme court reform program are on the air nightly; scarcely a day goes by that some senator and usually several of them and numerous congressmen participate in debate or issue statements concerning the great controversy, and from the tremendous source of propaganda supply at the command of the President come countless statements and interviews and radio speeches praising the President's plan. Even the President himself has made one of his famous "fireside chats" telling why he should be given the new power.

In the meantime—and some more strange bedfellows—we find the most peculiar cross currents operating. Among some of the religious groups, there are many who fear that the court packing plan will void constitutional guarantees of religious freedom. They fear eventual control of the churches by the state, having in mind, no doubt what has happened to religious groups in Germany and Soviet Russia.

Editorials from the Catholic press are being circulated privately among many legislators and against these are some Protestant preachers who take the position that the Supreme court is out of date and ought to be reformed. Numerous Jewish leaders are opposing the reform but among the Jews are many who feel that President Roosevelt is right.

Then there is the split among the farm leaders. I refer to farm organizations with national spokesmen. Some are for the change and some against it.

Uppermost in the minds of all of the opponents seems to be a fundamental fear that to change the court will open the door through which dictators may walk. To illustrate the type of statements coming forth from observers of national reputation as regards this point, I am going to quote from a recent expression by the distinguished columnist, Westbrook Pegler. Lately he wrote:

"All of a sudden, Mr. Roosevelt discovers that the Supreme court is largely senile and demands quick action on a proposal which, if adopted, would create an easy precedent for the most cynical packing of the Supreme court by someone of the type of Huey Long or Warren Harding, Mussolini or Hitler in years to come. It might not be many years either. . . . All dictators pack the courts by legal means as a preliminary to the promulgation of their dictatorial laws. After that it is comparatively easy to take over, because the courts belong to the dictator and do as he orders."

There can be no question, of course, that the thing Mr. Roosevelt proposes to have congress do for him is legal. Since, however, it is legal in this instance, it will be legal, of course, for someone else to come along after Mr. Roosevelt and pack the court with men of his own choosing, men who will decide questions as the then President desires them to decide. There is no limit to what may come if once the door is opened. Senator Wheeler, the Montana Democrat who has long been outstanding in the liberal character of views he holds, has added to this thought the expression that if the door is to be opened, the people must do it—not the congress that was elected without voters having heard the proposition mentioned.

As the fight of packing the Supreme court waxes warmer, one can not help noting how even clever politicians make mistakes.

They Make Mistakes

There are many who believe that Mr. Roosevelt made a grievous error in proposing revision of the Supreme court in the fashion he chose while there are others who say that he was elected by such a tremendous majority that he will have the people behind him regardless of the character of proposition advanced to congress.

It is interesting to note how many congressmen and senators are dodging the issue. Their silence is positively thunderous because they do not know how the people back home feel about the general proposition. There are others who have come out boldly for one reason or another in support of the plan and there are some 33 or more in the senate who have determined their position already and are ready to fight to the finish to stop passage of such a law.

Then there was the mistake which Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, made in the senate the other day. He vigorously denounced what he termed propaganda and a conspiracy to defeat the President's plan. He called attention to much newspaper and editorial comment in opposition and accused all of those people indiscriminately with being part of a gigantic conspiracy against the court pack.

The humor of the Robinson outburst seemed not to be apparent to the otherwise kindly mannered senator whom I very much admire. What he did by an hour-long attack in the senate was to re-emphasize all of the criticism of the President's plan.

One might refer in this connection also to the explosive type of speech made by Harry Hopkins, relief administrator. Of course, everyone knows that Mr. Hopkins has made his life's work that of looking after suffering humanity. He is on the government pay roll in such a job. Mr. Hopkins attacked all opposition to the President's plan because he said it was in the interest of humanity to do so. The relief administrator made his appeal direct to all of those receiving federal money through relief rolls and that obviously will be taken up by opponents of the President's plan who undoubtedly will say as some already have hinted that Mr. Hopkins is trying to muster relief classes to bring pressure upon congress.

Lesson for March 21

JOHN'S PICTURE OF THE TRIAL AND CRUCIFIXION

LESSON TEXT — John 19: 4-9, 14-18, 25-30.

GOLDEN TEXT — Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us; and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. I John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC — When Jesus Died for Us.

JUNIOR TOPIC — On a Hill Far Away. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC — Christ's Cross and Its Meaning for Me. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC — Christ's Cross and Mine.

The cross is accepted throughout the world as the emblem of the Christian church. The death of the Son of God for the sins of the world is a focal point not only in history but in theology. It is for this reason that we give so much study to the cross and its meaning.

Calvary comes between Christmas and Easter. Jesus came as the Babe of Bethlehem—God incarnate in the flesh. He died for you and me. Death could not hold him. He arose in victory. He is now at the Father's right hand, an Advocate with the Father. He is coming again. Each statement is an indispensable truth!

The assigned text gives only a portion of the moving account of the trial and crucifixion of Jesus but suffices to bring before us in graphic contrast four pictures—

I. Pilate—Convinced But Afraid.

Pilate was in a most difficult position. To turn one way meant to incur the wrath of the Jews he governed. To turn the other meant that he would be accused of disloyalty to Rome. He was convinced that Jesus was innocent, but was afraid to follow his own convictions.

Many there are who follow in his steps. They know what they ought to do with Jesus, but fear the comments of friends or loss of earthly advantage, and take their place with Pilate.

II. The Jews—Hostile and Hard-hearted.

The common people heard Jesus gladly. They loved him and would have followed him. But the Jewish leaders, and those whom they had misled, hated him with malicious hatred.

They are typical of those who in our day have long and repeatedly rejected the claims of the Lord Jesus on their lives. They have hardened their hearts against him until they have become embittered.

Paul says, "They received not the love of the truth that they might be saved, and for this cause God shall send them a strong delusion, that they should believe a lie" (II Thess. 2:10,11).

Let those who have long rejected the Saviour be warned lest they also crucify afresh the Son of God.

III. The Disciples—Remembered by the Saviour.

The thoughtful tenderness of Jesus in providing for his mother even in his own hour of deep suffering, moves upon our hearts and urges us to follow his example. This is a hard world; let the followers of Jesus be tender and kind.

In thus caring for his mother, Jesus gives thought also to the new responsibility of the disciple "whom he loved." What a sacred and responsible trust, but is it not true that we also are called and commissioned by him?

IV. Jesus—The Saviour.

To see the guiltless, spotless Son of God hung on the cross in propitiation for our sins is to bring us to our knees to cry as did Martin Luther, "For me, for me!"

Majestic in the assurance that he laid down his own life, he walks as a King in the midst of all the confusion round about him.

He was
1. Silent. His enemies made great hue and cry against him. Pilate questioned him again and again. Few were the words he spoke, but fraught with more meaning than all the words of men.

2. Strong. All through his life and in his death one is impressed by his strength. All too often sacred art, drawing on its imagination, presents our Lord as an effeminate weakling. No; he was and is gloriously strong.

3. Sympathetic. We have already dwelt on his tender love for his mother. Gentleness is always an attribute of strength, not of weakness.

4. The Saviour. When he cried "It is finished," he did so in no weak submission to an inevitable death. No; he had wrought out redemption, a complete and finished redemption for you and for me.

Now Is the Time

To be always intending to lead a new life but never to find time to set about it, this is as if a man should put off eating and drinking and sleeping from one day and night to another, till he is starved and destroyed.—Tillotson.

THE GARDEN MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DINE

WNU Service

"Oh, Markham, my dear Markham!" Vance shook his head sadly. "However . . . As you say. There is something back of the lady's histrionics. She has ideas. But she's circuitous. And she wants us to be like those Chinese gods who can't proceed except in a straight line. Sad. But let's try makin' a turn. The situation is something like this: An unhappy lady slips out through the butler's pantry and presents herself on the roof-garden, hopin' to attract our attention. Having succeeded, she informs us that she has proved conclusively that a certain Mr. Kroon has done away with Swift because of amorous jealousy. The lady herself, let us assume, is the spurned and not the spurner. She resents it. She has a temper and is vengeful—and she comes to the roof here for the sole purpose of convincing us that Kroon is guilty."

"But her story is plausible enough," said Markham aggressively. "Why try to find hidden meanings in obvious facts? Kroon could have done it. And your psychological theory regarding the woman's motives eliminates him entirely."

"It doesn't eliminate him at all. It merely tends to involve the lady in a rather unpleasant bit of chicanery. The fact is, her little drama here on the roof may prove most illuminatin'."

Vance stretched his legs out before him and sank deeper into his chair.

"Curious situation. Y' know, Markham, Kroon deserted the party about fifteen or twenty minutes before the big race—legal matters to attend to for a maiden aunt, he explained—and he didn't appear again until after I had phoned you. Assumed immediately that Swift had shot himself. Doubt inspired me to converse with the elevator boy. I learned that Kroon had not gone down or up in the elevator since his arrival here early in the afternoon."

"What's that!" Markham exclaimed. "That's more than suspicious—taken with what we have just heard from this Miss Weatherby."

"I dare say," Vance was unimpressed. "The legal mind at work. But from my gropin' amateur point of view, I'd want more—oh, much more. However,"—Vance rose and meditated a moment—"I'll admit that a bit of lovin' communion with Mr. Kroon is definitely indicated." He turned to Heath. "Send the chap up, will you, Sergeant?"

Heath nodded and started toward the door.

"And Sergeant," Vance halted him; "you might question the elevator boy and find out if there is any one else in the building whom Kroon is in the habit of calling on. If so, follow it up with a few discreet inquiries."

Heath vanished down the stairs, and a minute or so later Kroon sauntered into the study with the air of a man who is bored and not a little annoyed.

"I suppose I'm in for some more tricky questions," he commented.

After glancing about him, Kroon sat down leisurely at one end of the davenport. The man's manner, I could see, infuriated Markham, who leaned forward and asked in cold anger:

"Have you any urgent reasons for objecting to give us what assistance you can in our investigation of this murder?"

Kroon raised his eyebrows.

"None whatever," he said with calm superiority. "I might even be able to tell you who shot Woody."

"That's most interestin'," murmured Vance, studying the man indifferently. "But we'd much rather find out for ourselves, don't y' know?"

Kroon shrugged maliciously and said nothing.

"When you deserted the party this afternoon, Mr. Kroon," Vance went on, "you gratuitously informed us that you were headed for a legal conference of some kind with a maiden aunt. Would you object to giving us, merely as a matter of record, the name and address of your aunt, and the nature of the legal documents?"

"I most certainly would object," returned Kroon coolly. "I fail to see why you should be interested in my family affairs."

Markham swung round toward the man.

"That's for us to decide," he snapped. "Do you intend to answer Mr. Vance's question?"

Kroon shook his head.

"I do not! I regard that question as incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial. Also frivolous."

"Yes, yes," Vance smiled at Markham. "It could be, don't y' know. However, let it pass, Markham. Present status: Name and address of maiden aunt, unknown; nature of legal documents, unknown; reason for the gentleman's reticence, also unknown."

Markham resentfully mumbled a few unintelligible words and resumed smoking his cigar while Vance continued the interrogation.

"I say, Mr. Kroon, would you also consider it irrelevant—and the rest of the legal verbiage—if I asked you by what means you departed and returned to the Garden apartment?"

Kroon appeared highly amused.

"I'd consider it irrelevant, yes; but since there is only one sane way I could have gone and come back,

I'm perfectly willing to confess to you that I took a taxicab to and from my aunt's."

Vance gazed up at the ceiling as he smoked.

"Suppose," he said, "that the elevator boy should deny that he took you either down or up in the car since your first arrival here this afternoon. What would you say?"

"I'd say that he had lost his memory—or was lying."

"Yes, of course. The obvious retort. Quite." Vance's eyes moved slowly to the man on the davenport. "You will probably have the opportunity of saying just that on the witness stand."

Kroon's eyes narrowed and his face reddened. Before he could speak, Vance went on.

"And you may also have the opportunity of officially giving or withholding your aunt's name and address. The fact is, you may find yourself in the most distressin' need of an alibi."

Kroon sank back on the davenport with a supercilious smile.

"You're very amusing," he commented lightly. "What next? If you'll ask me a reasonable question, I'll be only too happy to answer."

"Well, let's see where we stand," Vance suppressed an amused smile.

"You left the apartment at approximately a quarter to four, took the elevator downstairs and then a taxi, went to your aunt's to fuss a bit with legal documents, drove back in a taxi, and took the elevator upstairs. Bein' gone a little over half an hour. During your absence Swift was shot. Is that correct?"

A Settlement Was Reached.

"Yes," Kroon was curt.

"But how do you account for the fact that when I met you in the hall on your return, you seemed miraculously cognizant of the details of Swift's passing?"

"We've been over that, too. I knew nothing about it. You told me Swift was dead, and I merely surmised the rest."

"Yes—quite. No crime in accurate surmisals. Deuced queer coincidence, however. Taken with other facts. As likely as a five-horse win parlay. Extr'ordin'ry."

"I'm listening with great interest," Kroon had again assumed his air of superiority. "Why don't you stop beating about the bush?"

"Worth-while suggestion," Vance crushed out his cigarette and got up. "What I was leadin' up to was the fact that someone has definitely accused you of murdering Swift."

Kroon started, and his face went pale. After a few moments he forced a harsh guttural noise intended for a laugh.

"And who, may I ask, has accused me?"

"Miss Madge Weatherby."

One corner of Kroon's mouth went up in a sneer of hatred.

"She would! And she probably told you that it was a crime of passion—caused by an uncontrollable jealousy."

"Just that," nodded Vance. "It seems you have been forcing your unwelcome attentions upon her, with dire threats; whereas, all the time, she was madly enamored of Mr. Swift. And so, when the strain became too great, you eliminated your rival."

"Well, I'll be damned!" Kroon thrust his hands deep into his pockets. "I see what you're driving at. Why didn't you tell me this in the first place?"

"Waitin' for the final odds," Vance returned. "You hadn't laid your bet. But now that I've told you, do you care to give us the name and address of your maiden aunt and the nature of the legal documents you had to sign?"

"That's all nonsense," Kroon spluttered. "I don't need an alibi. When the time comes—"

CHAPTER VIII

At this moment Heath appeared at the door, and walking directly to Vance, handed him a page torn from his note-book, on which were several lines of handwriting.

Vance read the note rapidly as Kroon looked on with malignant resentment. Then he folded the paper and slipped it into his pocket.

"When the time comes . . ." he murmured. "Yes—quite." He raised his eyes lazily to Kroon. "As you say. When the time comes. The time has now come, Mr. Kroon."

The man stiffened, but did not speak.

"Do you, by any chance," Vance continued, "know a lady named Stella Fruemon? Has a snug little apartment on the seventeenth floor of this building—only two floors below. Says you were visitin' her around four o'clock today. Left her at exactly four-fifteen. Which might account for your not using the elevator. Also for your reluctance to give us your aunt's name and address. Might account for other things as well . . . Do you care to revise your story?"

Kroon appeared to be thinking fast. He walked nervously up and down the study floor.

"Puzzlin' and interestin' situation," Vance went on. "Gentleman leaves this apartment at—let's say—ten minutes to four. Family documents to sign. Doesn't enter the elevator. Appears in apartment two floors below within a few minutes—been a regular visitor there. Remains till 4:15. Then departs. Shows up again in this apartment at half-past four. In the meantime, Swift is shot through the head—exact time unknown. Gentleman is apparently familiar with various details of the shooting. Refuses to give information regarding his whereabouts during his absence. A lady accuses him of the murder, and demonstrates how he could have accomplished it. Also kindly supplies the motive. Fifteen minutes of gentleman's absence—namely, from 4:15 to 4:30—unaccounted for."

Vance drew on his cigarette.

"I say, Mr. Kroon, any suggestions?"

Kroon came to a sudden halt and swung about.

He sucked in a deep noisy breath and made a despairing gesture.

"All right, here's the story. Take it or leave it. I've been mixed up with Stella Fruemon for the past year. She's nothing but a gold-digger and blackmailer. Madge Weatherby got on to it. She's the jealous member of this combination—not me. And she cared about as much for Woody Swift as I did. Anyway, I got involved with Stella Fruemon. It came to a show-down, and I had to pay through the nose. To avoid scandal for my family, of course. At any rate, we each got our lawyers, and a settlement was reached. She finally named a stiff figure and agreed to sign a general release from all claims. In the circumstances, I had no alternative. Four o'clock today was the time set for the completion of the transaction. My lawyer and hers were to be at her apartment. The certified check and the papers were ready. So I went down there a little before four to clean up the whole dirty business. And I cleaned it up and got out. I had walked down the two flights of stairs to her apartment, and at 4:15, when the hold-up was over, I walked back up the stairs."

Kroon took a deep breath and frowned.

"I was so furious—and relieved—that I kept on walking without realizing where I was going. When I opened the door which I thought led into the public hallway outside the Garden apartment, I found I was on the terrace of the roof. When I saw where I was I thought I'd come through the garden and go down the stairway there. It was really the natural thing to do . . ."

"You knew about the gate leading into the garden, then?"

"I've known about it for years. Everybody who's been up here knows about it. Anything wrong with my knowing about the gate?"

"No. Quite natural. And so, you opened the gate and entered the garden?"

"Yes."

"And that would be between a quarter after four and twenty minutes after four?"

"I wasn't holding a stop-watch on myself, but I guess that's close enough . . . When I entered the garden I saw Swift slumped down in his chair. His position struck me as funny, but I paid no attention to it until I spoke to him and got no answer. Then I approached and saw the revolver lying on the tiles, and the hole in his head. I can tell you, and I started to run downstairs to give the alarm. But I realized it would look bad for me. There I was, alone on the roof with a dead man . . ."

"Ah, yes. Discretion. So you played safe. Can't say that I blame you entirely—if your chronology is accurate. So, I take it, you re-entered the public stairway and came down to the front door of the Garden apartment."

"That's just what I did."

"By and by, during the brief time you were on the roof, or even often you returned to the stairway, did you hear a shot?"

Kroon thought a moment.
